

Keeping our promise

Dear
Supporters,

As we approach our 10th anniversary, the staff and board of directors of the Brandywine Health Foundation continue to build upon our past successes while exploring new ways to make good on our original promise: to improve the health of our Coatesville community. During the past year, thankfully, the stock market and our endowment's investment performance improved, while you, the foundation's supporters, stayed steadfastly loyal and generous. While we remain fiscally prudent, we cannot afford to be strengthen our communities and families will make all the difference in the quality and longevity of our children's lives, particularly for the poorest and most vulnerable.

During these difficult economic times, the commitment of our donors and the foundation to the core group of health-care safety net providers serving the Coatesville area has been critical in helping these providers meet the expanding needs. Besides maintaining our ongoing funding commitments to

Besides providing critical financial support, our effectiveness depends on the partnerships and mutual trust we have developed over the past nine years with our grantee agencies; the Coatesville Area School District; the local, state, county and federal entities committed to Coatesville's revival and its residents' health; and with the business community.

We promise to make you, our valued supporters, proud of your association with the Brandywine Health Foundation.

complacent in addressing the desperate needs of many in our community.

Indeed, despite our great strides since 2001, we have in no way finished what we started out to do: to improve access to primary care—including oral and behavioral health services—for the poor and uninsured, and to reduce racial and ethnic health outcome disparities, such as the high rate of low-birthweight African-American babies. Studies show that the steps we take together now with our schools to ChesPenn Health Services and Chester County Community Dental, we also funded our 11 other priority safety net providers.

Our youth-oriented focus also resulted in the launch of the Coatesville Youth Initiative; the creation of a related Summer Youth ServiceCorps, which offered meaningful community employment and skills training to 30 teenagers; and the establishment of a Game Changers initiative. (Learn more on pages 2 and 3.)

With so many opportunities to give of your charitable time and generous support, we hope that you continue to view our efforts in Coatesville to be as relevant, worthwhile and rewarding as we do.

With sincerest thanks,

Promising to Serve

When Clare Lindelow became a Coatesville Area School District nurse 11 years ago, helping children learn to wash their hands properly was critically important. As we learned last year with the swine flu pandemic, that's still a priority: hand washing was reemphasized as the most important thing children and their families could do to prevent the spread of this contagious, possibly deadly disease—and school nurses such as Lindelow were key to that educational effort.

One thing has changed, though: Lindelow now relies upon a network of health providers in Coatesville working together to enhance her efforts. “Having resources as available and as close as the Brandywine Center and the Coatesville Center for Community Health has really assisted us in helping students and their families to get matched up with the care and services they need,” she says.

The improving partnership between the Coatesville schools and the health agencies in the Brandywine Center and the Coatesville Center for Community Health is welcome—especially in a community where hundreds of children are still not accessing regular health care, particularly dental services, and where, until recently, behavioral health services were not readily available for children.

The Brandywine Health Foundation's focus has been to identify—and fill—such care gaps. Our support led to the opening of Chester County Community Dental in 2002, ChesPenn Health Services' 2004 arrival and the foundation's partnership with the Chester County Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, which brought Child Guidance Resource Centers to Coatesville.

Strengthening existing programs, such as those offered by Planned Parenthood, the Nurse-Family Partnership and the Maternal and Child Health Consortium of Chester County (MCHC), has enabled outreach workers and public health nurses to focus on helping hundreds of young women delay pregnancy until they are ready to parent. These strengthened programs have also helped hundreds more get early and frequent prenatal care, as well as educating new mothers and fathers about how to be the best possible parents. Ancillary services provided by Family Service of Chester County's trained bilingual staff, such as family therapy and postpartum depression counseling, also have been critical.

Given the challenging economy and the complexity of the issues encountered by families living in poverty, we now are encouraging these valuable agencies to cross-pollinate with each other, increasing the knowledge and connections between staff at each agency so that they are better able to serve their patients and clients and, when appropriate, to refer them to where their needs can best be met.

Examples of such successful collaborations include the following:

- Community Dental's sealant program to prevent tooth decay for school district children, which resulted in 2,093 free screenings and 1,933 sealants.

- Family Service's counseling for women with post-partum depression who have been screened and referred by MCHC's Healthy Start outreach workers.
- ChesPenn and Child Guidance's plans to integrate behavioral health services into primary care visits, increasing the chances that ChesPenn's patients can more successfully manage anxiety and chronic diseases, reduce episodes of depression and successfully quit smoking.
- The third annual community Block Party successfully coordinated by agencies located in the Brandywine Center; more than 600 residents received valuable health information and honored Coatesville-area youth service leaders.

Washing your hands is a simple solution to better health. It's the more complex problems, such as reaching those in need with effective health education messages and making health care financially accessible to everyone, that requires us to collectively maximize our resources. That's why the foundation stands ready to assist our grantees in their efforts to create a care system that best serves our children and their families.

Promises to Our Children

Are we doing enough to help young people grow into healthy, productive citizens? Last year, our community studied that question through a year-long planning process. The answer: With the foundation's support and the partnership of the Coatesville Area School District (CASD), the community can indeed do more.

Coatesville Youth Initiative: Collaborating for Our Teens

A year ago, we launched the Coatesville Youth Initiative (CYI), an ambitious plan to address the broader health needs of youth and young adults (ages 12–24 years) in the greater Coatesville area.

In less than a year, CYI is fostering unprecedented collaboration among community residents, youth, area businesses, nonprofit and county agencies, youth-serving organizations and the school district. Working together, we are doing the following:

- Strengthening the network of resources and programs available for youth and young adults;
- Forming partnerships to increase the number of youth being served;
- Opening communication lines to prevent duplication of services;
- Increasing our awareness of both the assets available to meet our youths' needs and the still-existing gaps that are preventing them from maximizing their potential; and

- Adopting evidence-based programs that address the toughest problems and assist the children most at risk of failure.

Among the collaboration's first successes is the Youth ServiceCorps, which employed 30 teens this past summer in community service positions.

"I have witnessed first-hand the professionalism, high energy and deep-rooted passion of CYI director Chaya Scott and her team," says Angelo Romaniello Jr., Ph.D., CASD's director of high school education and assistant superintendent. "I am confident that this partnership will result in tangible and positive, life-changing opportunities for our young people."

CYI ACHIEVEMENTS

To date, CYI achievements include the following:

- Implementing the Community Plan, an action blueprint developed by the CYI Steering Committee, which reviewed statistical data and focus group findings and discussed critical issues with community stakeholders.
- Establishing active workgroup subcommittees to address our targeted priorities: Pathways Beyond High School; Greater Parental Engagement; Juvenile Justice; Youth Summit Committee; and Out-of-School Time Task Force.
- Launching Game Changers, the Coatesville Youth Council. Participating CASD students are being trained to actively participate in CYI and guide the development of programs benefitting 7th to 12th graders.
- Securing state funding to utilize the same "Communities That Care" youth-oriented prevention-planning strategy that has proven effective in several Chester County towns, and across the United States. In February 2010 the foundation received $50,594 from the Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency to hire an experienced community mobilizer, Jarvis Berry, to work for CYI.
- Training five key leaders for Communities That Care: Chester County District Attorney Joseph Carroll; CASD board member Bob Knecht; Angelo Romaniello Jr., Ph.D., assistant CASD superintendent; Coatesville Weed and Seed Director Allen Smith; and local minister and foundation board member Linwood Smith.
- Administering the Pennsylvania Youth Survey (PAYS) to all sixth-, eighth-, 11th- and 12th-grade CASD students. For the first time the school district conducted this survey and allowed the data to be collected for our youth initiative. From this effort we will learn the daily risks that our youths face and the strengths Coatesville offers to help them avoid risky behaviors. This critical information will lead to the implementation of evidence-based programs that promote positive youth development.

Youth ServiceCorps:

Greeting nearly 120 guests at the August graduation of the Coatesville Youth Initiative's Youth ServiceCorps, Ke'asya Gray, who worked at the Regency Park Apartments, said, "The CYI ServiceCorps program was a chance for me to learn new skills, but I think I learned so much more. I've learned to be patient, caring and respectful of people's differences."

Gray was just one of 30 teenagers from the Coatesville Area School District who were employed full-time this past summer in community service positions thanks to an $111,000 Brandywine Health Foundation grant. "We are especially proud that, in addition to the staff time we have put into building the Coatesville Youth Initiative, we were able to provide direct funding as a concrete investment in this valuable summer program," says Thomas J. Belmont Jr., foundation board chair.

The goals of the ServiceCorps included: equipping teens with transferrable life, work-readiness and leadership skills; engaging them in meaningful and personally relevant service activities that address community needs; and increasing youth-led civic engagement.

For eight weeks the 14- to 17-year-olds worked at one of nine community organizations: Art Partners Studio; Regency Park Apartments; Coatesville Area Public Library; Camp Rejoice (Bernardtown Baptist Church); Bridge Academy & Community Center; New Life in Christ Fellowship; Brandywine YMCA; Handi-Crafters; and BigShot Archery. Paid $7.50 per hour, they ate a breakfast provided by the Great Valley School District at New Life in Christ Fellowship, then worked 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at their respective work sites Monday through Thursday.

Every Friday they gathered at the Brandywine Center to participate in leadership training/resource days. Topics covered included: diversity, team building, financial literacy, planning a community service project, assessing community needs, and the ethic of service. "The theme resonating throughout the entire program was the power of one, that one person can make a difference," says Chaya Scott, CYI director, "and that became clear to each of the teens by the end of the program."

Commenting on a young congregant who participated, Pastor Dan K. Williams of New Life in Christ Fellowship

Learning the Value of Meaningful Work

says, "He was a fellow in desperate straits in terms of his need for a chance ... an opportunity. This program altered his objective of wanting more out of life, recognizing another side to working hard, being creative, and the discipline that comes from it. He now has a renewed commitment to working at being a part of the right company, trying to make better decisions."

The participants also took a field trip to Stroud Water Research Center to learn about the importance of preserving the Brandywine River. The summer program culminated with a morning community service project, sprucing up Ash, Palmer and Coates Street parks and delivering hundreds of children's books to the McNeil Children's Library at the Brandywine Center. In the afternoon, they organized a summer celebration at Ash Park, with hundreds of children and residents enjoying a complimentary lunch, music, and fitness activities coordinated by the Brandywine YMCA.

"I loved seeing the clients smile just because we were there to work alongside them," says Sarah Victoria Beck, whose first-ever job involved working at Handi-Crafters, which provides employment opportunities for those with disabilities. "I will never forget the memories and skills I have gained from this program ... It has done a lot for me. I liked this program so much I have decided to join their volunteer program."

"I have grown personally because I have become more of an adult at the work site. I also have grown professionally because I am dealing with money and learning how to save like an adult versus how to spend my money on things I need, not want."

"The best thing that happened to me this summer was getting into this program. If I didn't make it here I would be up to no good. I also believe one of the best things was or is how my personality has grown so much."

Donors Keep Their Promise

Thank you to the countless members of our community who have kept their promise to have an impact through their generous gifts of time, talent and treasure.

Little House, Large Impact

More than 50 hard-working and deeply committed volunteers support the Brandywine Consignment Shop, “the little yellow house” on Route 113 in Downingtown. During the past nine years, their efforts have resulted in significant contributions to the Brandywine Health Foundation. This past fall these dedicated volunteers also held their first appraisal fair, with four area experts examining items to inform attendees if their objects were valuable treasures or sentimental keepsakes. The shop also launched its new website, www.brandywineconsignment.org.

Foundation donor Hannah Spatola (center), who brought items for appraisal, speaking with (l. to r.) Jaclyn Gleber, R.D.H, Ph.D., of Chester County Community Dental; Jill Whitcomb, the foundation’s director of special events; and Frances M. Sheehan, foundation president & CEO.

Garden Party and Strawberry Festival Net More Than $170,000

More than 25,000 people once again attended our annual Strawberry Festival, and more than 350 guests enjoyed our 2010 Garden Party. Thanks to these outstanding turnouts, for the second consecutive year these two events combined raised more than $170,000 for our community. Co-chaired by Mary Holleran and Kathy Lovell, the Garden Party took place on May 26 at Houyhnhnm, the Coatesville home of Jeff Seder and Nina Burnaford. An “East Meets West” theme was reflected in both the décor and light supper fare.

Held on the grounds of Brandywine Hospital, the four-day Strawberry Festival was co-chaired by Chris Saello and Stephanie Waite and presented by First Niagara and PECO. We are extremely grateful to these two lead sponsors and the hospital, as well as the many other businesses, individuals and volunteers who so willingly gave their financial support and/or time to again make the party and festival such rousing successes.

Investment Policy

It is the Brandywine Health Foundation's policy to invest funds with an asset mix of 75% equities and 25% fixed instruments and cash. A volunteer committee of experienced business managers, chaired by Treasurer David England, regularly reviews the foundation's financial statements and portfolio, evaluating the performance of our investment managers and accountants. The committee's investment strategy is designed to protect the foundation's current and long-term benefit to the community by balancing the goal of growing to meet future need while prudently minimizing risk.

Audit Committee

The foundation's Audit Committee is an independent group of volunteers, chaired by former County Comptroller and current Commissioner Carol Aichele, joined by three experienced accountants who do not serve on the Board of Directors. It is this Committee's responsibility to hire, evaluate, and oversee the work of the foundation's auditors, Maillie, Falconiero & Company LLP, independent of the Board of Directors, the President and CEO, and the staff accountant.

Note to the Statement of Financial Position

Loans Receivable represent funds borrowed by Brandywine Health & Housing, LP due to the foundation for the development of the Brandywine Center, and a loan to the BHS Transitional Corporation for the resolution of business issues; this latter loan will be repaid from the proceeds of a property sale. Grants Payable includes a commitment to ChesPenn Health Services over the next three years.

Additional Note

Funds held by the BHS Transitional Corporation are housed at TD Bank. These funds are used to repay certain financial obligations of Brandywine Hospital prior to its sale to Community Health Systems. All funds remaining at BHS after the resolution of these issues will be donated to the foundation.

Trauma Center Opens

Two years ago the Brandywine Health Foundation provided funding to the Chester County Trauma Services Task Force, which was launched by Congressman Jim Gerlach, recently retired foundation board member, and chaired by retired State Rep. Carole Rubley. After more than a year of research, public meetings and community education about the need for Chester County to once again have a fully accredited trauma center, Paoli Hospital announced it would take that important step. We are pleased that on October 1 the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania granted final approval to the new Paoli Hospital Trauma Center, a critical step in improving health care for the residents of Chester County.

Nursing Scholarship Changes

When Brandywine Hospital was sold in 2001, Community Health Systems (CHS) committed to keep the Brandywine School of Nursing open for two years. Instead, CHS maintained its commitment for nine years, which enabled the school to train hundreds of Chester County residents to serve as nurses in our community. Increasingly, though, hospitals are hiring nurses trained at the bachelor's level and hospital-based registered nurse training programs are diminishing in number nationwide. Recognizing the changing marketplace, Brandywine Hospital announced last year that it would merge its program into the Immaculata School of Nursing. As a result, scholarship funds held at the Brandywine Health Foundation are now awarded to students at both Immaculata's and West Chester University's Schools of Nursing.
